TEACHING HISTORY

Philadelphia UNIVERISTY | Amman, Jordan | 2021 – Now

As a Finance lecturer at Philadelphia University, I leverage my expertise to create an engaging learning environment. I prioritize accessibility, providing support and guidance to students outside of class. Continuous learning ensures my teaching materials are up to date. Constructive feedback and fair assessments help students gauge their progress. Professionalism fosters a respectful classroom. Collaboration encourages teamwork, while ethics promote responsible financial decision-making. Together, these principles equip students with practical finance knowledge and skills.

Fellow/Instructor

- Employ subject specialist knowledge to deliver comprehensive lectures and workshops at both the undergraduate and postgraduate levels on a variety of modules including Financial markets, Corporate Finance, International Trade, MBA Research Methods and MBA Dissertations.
- Design and plan informative lecture content, learning outcomes and activities such as group discussions and role-play to improve student engagement and challenge/stimulate student interest in core topics.
- Evaluate student assignments and provide detailed, supportive feedback for both formative and summative assessments utilizing the University's generic assessment criteria in line with the requirements of the UK Professional Standards Framework.
